

You see a street...

We see a lifeline that is a hometown with planned traffic flow, fire stations, thousands of visitors each year, city parks and community centers for children of all ages. Our streets take us to our jobs, our churches, our fun places and even to grandma's house.

CITIES MEAN BUSINESS

You see a storefront...

We see a family-owned business with a proprietor who counts on city water, sewer, police and fire protection, and other services to keep providing that special hometown experience to his customers, each of whom he treats like family.

You see a ballpark...

We see an investment in hometown quality of life that offers a special place to host national tournaments and welcome visitors. This is the same special place where kids of all ages can enjoy sports and outdoor activities with neighbors and friends.

You see a bike path...

We see a way for families to spend time together, exercise and enjoy the beauty of their hometown. Walkable communities link outdoor activities with businesses and neighborhoods so downtowns become gathering places for friends and family.

You see a police car...

We see a police officer who works closely with fire departments and EMS, who knows every business owner downtown, who can name every city street and who buys 12 snow cones on Saturdays even though his T-ball team has never won a game.
